franklinfamilyof5 One thing we learned during the last 6 weeks was that our emergency fund was not quite ready for a ready for a real emergency. Thankfully we didn't need to touch it but it could definitely use some work. We have big plans to travel as much as possible with the kids and want to be debt free in 2 years except for our mortgage but we haven't really done much more than throw money at things and hope it all falls into place. •

• The Pandemic had us look deeper into our finances together and make a plan for the future. We read Official Money Guide for Couples from @moneysavvygeneration and it gave us great tips for building a emergency fund, discussing finances together, saving for the future and really building a solid foundation together for our financial future. We have big plans and don't want anything, especially money, to hold us back. •
